15 Pictures Of French Food That Will Make Your Mouth Water

Posted by: Hannah Shakir | September 15, 2014

From local lamb to fresh garlic and delicate chocolate, the French know how to do food better than anyone else in the world. Because we like to back up a statement with hard proof, here are some pictures of French food taken during our trip to the Aveyron, including restaurant dining and markets. But be warned – this food porn is enough to get you hot under the collar.

Pink garlic

We all know the French love their garlic, and you can buy bunches of it at Villefranche-de-Rouergue market.

Bread topped with cheese

Two of our favourite French foods, get some bread and cheese to accompany your lunch.

Cheese soufflé

Michel Bras certainly knows how to make a cheese soufflé that melts in your mouth...

Variety of peppers

We're not quite sure of the variety of these peppers, all we know is they are extremely eye-catching!

More peppers!

We got a bit snap-happy at the colours of the peppers...

Sausages

The sausages in France are kind of monstrous, but definitely delicious!

Lamb

One of our favourite meals in Villefranche, Aveyron lamb with potato is succulent and juicy served medium-rare.

Saint-Jean-de-Luz Hake

Hake from the coast of Saint-Jean-de-Luz with a fennel vinaigrette courtesy of Cafe Bras in Rodez.

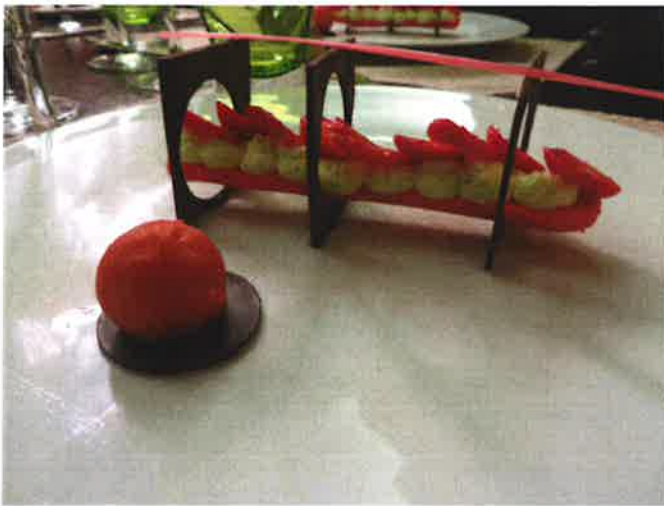

Nougat with almonds, hazelnuts and pistachios

This isn't just any nougat, this is Villefranche nougat with almonds, hazelnuts and pistachios...

Dried fruit

Take a sample or buy a bag of your favourite, the dried fruit here is as good as the fresh equivalent.

Macalon (long macaroon) with strawberries, cream, dark chocolate squares and raspberry sorbet

Because why have a macaroon when you can have a macalon?

Chocolate and praline tart

At this point we died in chocolate heaven.
